SOME ONE NEGLIGENT

Verdict of Jury in Drowning

INVESTIGATION TODAY

CONCLUSION REACHED THAT DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL.

Contributory Negligence Found, but the Blame Placed on No Shoulders.

An inquest was held at the morgue today in the case of the two eleven-year-old boys, Jettle Carrington and Lawrence Owen, who were drowned Sunday afternoon in a pond on the outskirts of the filtration plant. The testimony showed conclusively that the pool of water was a death trap, and that but few, if any, steps had been taken to prevent the loss of human life

It was in consequence of such testimony that the coroner's jury, composed of six representative citizens and business men, rendered the following verdict:

"At an inquisition taken at the District of Columbia morgue June 6, 1905, we do say upon our oaths that Jettie Carrington came to his death June 4, 1905, in a pond, at or near North Capital and Detroit streets northwest, from drowning. We believe that said death was due to accident caused by contributory negligence, the responsibility for which cannot be determined by the jury from the evidence at hand. "We, the coroner's jury, respectfully rec-ommend to the honorable District Comommend to the honorable District Commissioners that the police department should ascertain where and when such holes, ponds and other dangerous places exist, and when so located, should be immediately reported to the several precincts; and that proper steps be immediately taken in the interest of public safety."

This verdict is signed by the jury, Messrs, Frank K. Raymond, J. S. Wainwright, E. E. Remey, Thomas Walker, Henry Newman and Arthur Burrows.

The family of Jettie Carrington was represented at the hearing by Attorney George

The family of Jettle Carrington was represented at the hearing by Attorney George P. Hoover, and before the inquest began much praise was bestowed on William Jemison, who, although crippled, having lost the use of one arm by an iron bolt being blown through it, nevertheless sprang consciously into the pend and hauled one of overboard into the pond and hauled one of the lads ashore.

were identical.

The Testimony.

The corquer's jury, after calling at the homes of the drowned boys in company with Coroner J. Ramsey Nevitt, and being sworn over their bodies, repaired to he morgue, where the inquest was held, beginning about 11:30 o'clock this forenoon. The first witness called was Police Sergt. Daniel Slat-tery. He said he had been a member of the force for thirty years. He is familiar with the pond in which Lawrence Owen and Jettie Carrington were drowned Sunday afternoon. The pool has been there since the filtration plant work commenced. Originally the gully in which the pond is lo-cated was about 100 feet deep, but it has been gradually filled in. Witness had never heard of any complaints about the pond, and did not know its depth.

Policeman Henry Verr of the tenth precinct was the next witness. He has been a member of the police force for nearly seven years. Witness was on duty at the filtration plant last Sunday from 8 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock i nthe after-

"About 3:15 o'clock," said Policeman Verr, "while I was stending at 1st street and Michigan avenue, an old man came to me and told me two boys had fallen into the pond. I went to the place and found two pairs of shoes and two pairs of stockirgs and two hats on the shore of the pend. A boy informed me they belonged to two boys who had gone down the road."
Witness learned later that the articles belonged to two boys who had been riding on a raft in the pond. They were too heavy for the raft, however. It was some time before he learned definitely that the lads had been drowned in the pond.
"But you saw the hats, shoes and stockings on the bank when you first reached the pond?" queried Coroner Nevitt. "Yes, sir."

EXPRESS INDIGNATION.

Citizens of North Washington Condemn Dangerous Ponds.

The citizens of North Washington at a meeting last night at 1801 3d street northwest, under the auspices of the North Washington Citizens' Association, expressed in unmeasured terms their indignation at the causes which led to the drowning of Lawrence Owen and Jettle Carrington. In an impassioned address to the assemblage, Mr. John Imirie declared:

"Some one is responsible for the death of those boys. Today they are filling up the hole. They expect something. The District on former occasions has replied that it desires to keep such places for the dumping of street sweepings. Will we allow that to

He said that he long ago appreciated the fact that these gigantic holes would be left until the people were made to realize their existence by just such an accident as occurred. He called attention to the fact that there was a similar hole some time ago near his own residence. He complained several times about it, for every night when he returned home he expected. night when he returned home he expected, he said, to learn that one of his children had fallen into the water. To his complaints, Secretary Tindall of the Board of Commissioners, replied that the District desired to keep these places for dumping grounds.

"It might just as well have been your boys or mine," said Mr. Imirie, with feeling. "If the District is going purposely to let such death holes exist, are we going to sit idly by and see our children lose their lives?"

A resolution he introduced against the maintenance of ponds, such as that where the fatality occurred, was unanimously Mr. West's Comment.

Mr. Henry L. West, one of the District

Commissioners, was present and addressed the meeting. He said the letter read by Mr. Imirie had not reached him, but referred to the abatement of the pond at 15th and H streets, relating how he had requested the owner of the lot to fill it up, although it required the street cleaning department it required the street cleaning department to haul its sweepings half a mile farther to a dump. The criticism of the District government, he said, is welcomed, for as Commissioner he desired to learn what was wanted. He urged that all citizens attend the association meetings, so that when it asked for anything the Commissioners would know that it represented the desire of the entire community.

The association then turned its attention to the question of reciprocal transfers on the City and Suburban line. C. II. Ourand of the committee on railroads made a report. It was followed by a motion by Rev. Alexander Kent that the members be requested to subscribe to a fund to fight for reciprocal transfers, and that should the amount subscribed not reach $25, the balance should be taken from the treasury. It was adopted. The motion also contained a clause declaring that the association is in sympathy with the movement of other associations to secure reciprocal transfers.

$3.00 in the matter of these ponds of water around the city," said Commissioner West

Every banker in Washington will tell you "You cannot get rich by your individual labor."

Both Money and Muscle are at Work This Week on Railroad to Develop U.S. Realty Co.'s Property

MAKE MONEY WORK FOR It Works 24 Hours a Day.

You cannot accumulate a great amount of property by your individual work, as at best you can work but ten or twelve hours a day, while money works continually.

Uncle Sam's nation today is the most prosperous one in the world, because its greatest men have realized what work money can do—the energy of American money is felt around the world.

Washington's future is very great. While other cities must look for their growth entirely from within, Washington not only grows by reason of its own progressiveness, but by the expenditure of millions of dollars of Uncle Sam's money every year.

You can put $110.00 to work for you in Washington by paying $3 per month. You can put $220.00 to work for you by paying $5 per month.

You can put $550.00 to work for you by paying $10 per month.

You can put $1,100.00 to work for you by paying $20 per month. You only have to make these small monthly payments until the amount you pay and the dividends, which the company is sure to pay, aggregate $110 a share, after which you are paid the dividends regularly by check.

You will be credited with the dividends on the total amount of the stock you subscribe for from the day you make your first payment, just as though you paid the entire amount in cash.

The investment is in the stock of the United States Realty Co. of Washington, D. C., managed by men of the highest standing. The company owns 7,000,000 square feet of ground, largely on Pennsylvania avenue, in the District of Columbia. This stock will pay you all the dividends from the very day you make the first payment, so while you will be paying at the one end, the dividends are paying at the other end, and you will have money working for you—the only way to accumulate it.

Not only that, but if you die any time after your first payment, your shares, up to $1,000, will be issued, free, to your heirs.

Mr. C. B. Hunt, engineer of highways, stated upon the paper that his office desired to reserve the low places in the street as dumping grounds for excavations to be made in connection with future public work, whereupon the papers were returned to the health office, and were not subsequently seen by any one of the Commissioners. The letter of reply from the health officer to Mr. Imirle, however, advised the latter if he desired to appeal from the decision of the engineer department it the decision of the engineer department it would be necessary for him to address the matter directly to the board of Commis-sioners. The farm literature of a generation ago was largely wooden and spirftless, or else untrue to actual rural conditions. The new literature is vital and alive. The new, however, is yet mostly special and technical with the exception of the growing nature-literature. Artistic literature of the farm and rural affairs is yet scarcely known. Where is the high-class fiction that portrays the farmer as he is, without carlcaturing him? Where is the collection of really good farm poems? Who has developed the story interest in the farm? had been thrown in his face of having some words with her, when she threw the brick from the upper window at him.

"Judge, this fellow comes around and sits on my porch and I have ordered him away a good many times. Last night I had company, and I did not want him around, and I told him so. He did not like that, and he called me some bad names. There was a small brick on my window and I decreed a small brick on my window and I dropped it down on his head. But that didn't hurt

Making the Country Alluring. If the open country is to be made attractive to the best minds it must have an at-logical evolution progress that attaches to every domestic animal and every cultivated plant? We need short and sharp pictures of the man at his work and the woman in her home—such quick and vivid pictures in words as an artist would throw on his in words as an artist would throw on his canvas. There is nob'lity, genuineness, and majesty in a man 'useful work—much more than there is in a prince or a general or a society leader, whose role it is to post for the multitude. The man holding the plow, digging a ditch, picking fruit, the woman sweeping or making bread—what stronger pictures of human interest can there be than these?
